WANTED: A JEWISH POPE

We have always been happy over the fact that Judaism knew no ecclesiastical hierarchy whose decrees were absolute and binding. We have always rejoiced that every rabbi was a free lance, free to teach the religion of his soul, enriched by the beauties of Jewish tradition. But we must confess that we regretted that there was no Jewish bishop or pope in Toronto, who could have put a stop to that disgusting and degrading squabble over kosher meat, which occurred in our city last week. The whole incident was a chillul Hashem, a profanation of God's name, and a perversion of religion. To thousands of Jews the observance of the dietary laws is an important religious duty. It is deplorable that this sense of religious responsibility should be exploited, and should lead to a mad scramble for profits. The spectacle of rabbis running to secular courts to protect or to enhance the income they receive from trafficking in religious customs is annoying and disgusting. Against it we must protest, and protest vigorously. This squabbling and bickering, this patent commercialization of religion, this making of Jewish ritual the butt of ridicule must not continue.

The Jewish people of Toronto are entitled to have kosher meat prepared according to the traditional rabbinic decisions. They are entitled to have accredited supervisors who will verify for them that the meat is correctly prepared. But such supervision should be controlled by an agency which has no ulterior motive in the matter. At the present time some of the rabbis do the supervising. For such supervision they receive perquisites, and there is the rub. The quarrel which gained so much notoriety was one which involved the rabbinical perquisites. I can sympathize with these rabbis, though I do not condone their action. They need these perquisites for their livelihood. Too many congregations do not give their rabbis a living wage and compel them to seek for perquisites in order to maintain themselves and their families. But, deplorable as this situation may be, the rabbis are not justified in squabbling over these perquisites and making themselves objects of ridicule before the entire public, for Judaism suffers with them. They must never forget that they are the spiritual leaders of Israel, that theirs is the duty to hold up the ideal for their people and that they themselves in their own lives ought to strive to realize that ideal. Trafficking in religious ceremonies is not conducive to spirituality.

The occurrences of last week in connection with the kosher meat episode tend to undermine the respect of the masses, not only for the dietary laws, but also for religion in general. The rabbis should remember that that peace which Israel's prophets advocated should first find expression in rabbinical circles.

EVOLUTION IN THE PULPIT

An American clergyman who passed through Toronto in the past week stated that evolution was taught in no pulpit of this city. That clergyman was in error. Evolution has been taught from the pulpit of the Holy Blossom Synagogue in the past, and evolution will be taught there in the future. Liberal Judaism does not blind itself to the truths of science. Liberal religion of any kind does not attempt to hamper the search for truth in order to protect its theology. Liberal religion recognizes that theology is temporary and impermanent, that the theology of one age may be the superstition of the next. The spirit of religion is eternal and immutable, but man's way of expressing and defining it is subject to all human limitations, dependent on age and circumstance, and limited by the experience and knowledge of the race. Religious conceptions change; theologies are revolutionized; God-ideas are altered, but God remains unchanged. Why should puny man imagine that his petty notion of God in any way can affect God's nature? We know that men's ideas of God have changed. We know that men worshipped trees and rocks, fountains and rivers, the moon and the sun, the stars and the heaving ocean. We know that men made idols and images, works of their hands, and bowed down to them. We know that men created a Zeus and a Jupiter, an Odin and an Osiris, and called them gods. But we also know that these gods were scrapped when mankind grew in knowledge and spirituality. We recognize that in the last 3,000 years men's ideas about God have completely changed. Is it not, therefore, reasonable to assume in the next 3,000 years, as the human race will continue to develop, that the God-idea too will change? Is it not possible that the intelligent man of the year 4925 will regard our religious beliefs as primitive and crude? If we have faith in humanity, if we believe in progress, aye, if we believe in God, must we not accept the view that all human instincts are imperfect and will be improved in the future? Is not religion a human institution, and can it therefore not be perfected? Is it, too, not subject to the laws of evolution, and does its history not reveal a gradual growth from idolatry to monotheism? Would we not be arrogant if we were to say that in our day had been spoken the last word about God? The important thing is not how men describe God, but that they seek Him with all their hearts and souls.

DAVIS GIVES BAD ADVICE

After having foisted on the people of the United States the un-American Johnson Immigration Bill, a bill in which were openly and flagrantly flouted some of America's cardinal principles, the Hon. James J. Davis comes to Toronto and urges Canada to emulate the example of his country. The most pernicious features of the Johnson Bill are not its restrictive clauses, but its selective provisions, for its intent was to eliminate the immigrant from the Latin races and the southern European countries, and only to admit immigrants from the Nordic races. In other words, the Johnson Bill was the product of bigotry and chauvinism. It is as un-Christian as it is un-American. It sits in judgment on the peoples of southern Europe and arrogantly declares them inferior. It exalts the Nordic race, despite the fact that sober scientists maintain that there is no Nordic race. It assumes a philosophy of racial superiority, which has no basis whatsoever in objective truth. It is a bill based on bad science, and on worse ideals. Not satisfied with having written bad legislation on the statute books of the United States, Davis wants to urge Canada to do likewise. In other words, he wants to disseminate in Canada the narrow, bigoted and small-visioned spirit which for the while is dominant in the United States. Canada, do not succumb to it! Canada, do not become a vassal to the United States! Do not be too eager to mimic her! Do not be awed by her great wealth! If you oppose physical annexation to the United States, then surely

JEWS AND THE WORLD'S WORK

An English Publicist Shows Jews Are "Doing Other Things Besides Attending Bourses"

We do not design, within the scope of this article, to expound or evaluate the part which Jews are filling in the world's work. To some, whose misfortune is mere ignorance, the Jew presents himself either as a bloated capitalist or as a predatory bolshevist engaged in a crimson onslaught on capitalism.

That the two roles are scarcely consistent in an analysis of Jewish characteristics does not disturb the believers in either side of the antithesis. Some seem able to accept both sides, according to their mood of the moment.

But the inconsistency surely ought to disturb them. It ought to induce them to ask whether, after all, the main account of the Jew is not to be sought elsewhere than in capitalism on the one side and revolution on the other. Take this incident. On Thursday, July 26, the "Intellectual" Committee, set up by the League of Nations, held a plenary session at Geneva under the chairmanship of Professor Henri Bergson. This committee is engaged, among other matters, in co-ordinating, on an international basis, the work of the world's universities. Assuredly this is a matter of primary importance for the progress of men towards humanitarian ideals. And the chairman of the League's committee is a Jew!

Turn from the Old to the New World, from Geneva to New York. In April of last year an important conference was held at Columbia University, on the one hand, to celebrate the tercentenary of the first folio of Shakespeare's works—that literary event which marks out 1623 as a red-letter year in political history. On the other hand, the conference was designed to stimulate the English-speaking world's interest in the greatest dramatist of all times.

The conference attained a real success. Sir Israel Gollanez was deputed to represent England. He has made, as another Jewish scholar, Sir Sidney Lee, has done, many contributions to Shakespearian scholarship. To Sir Israel in large measure is owing the foundation of the Shakespeare Association and the institution of "Shakespeare's Day"—a day observed on the poet's birthday in the schools of England and America. And in the present English revival of interest in Shakespeare a leading part is taken by a Jew!

Our mention of Sir Sidney Lee reminds us that to him is not only owing the authoritative life of Shakespeare, but the completion (after Sir Leslie Stephen's death) of the great Dictionary of National Biography. We say nothing now of his biographies of Victoria and Edward VII. But no work in which literature and patriotism are more closely united can be conceived than the Dictionary to which we have alluded. And its assistant editor at the start, and its chief editor at the end, was a Jew!

Or let us take that most characteristic feature of English life, athletics. During the past months the newspapers have been vying with one another in their eulogies of Mr. H. M. Abrahams, who has proved himself the equal of the greatest athletes which our old universities have produced. And Mr. Abrahams, of course, is a Jew! So is Einstein, so was Ehrlich. In the realm of pure science, and of the application of science to medicine, these Jews have assuredly been taking more than their mere share in the world's work. Then let us consider another case of applied science—the direction of psychology to the investigation of industrial conditions.

The verdict is unanimous that Dr. Charles Myers has practically created the new school of industrial psychology, and Dr. Myers is a Jew! There is no bound to the beneficent possibilities of the new science. It is as important in its way as the most practical discoveries in mechanics. For it will probably cause vital changes in the methods of employment, it may reorganize labour on the psychological side, and may very possibly result in relieving the crushing mechanism of life.

Life under machinery needs this introduction of a principle which, while it recognizes the efficiency of machinery, realizes that the man who operates the machine is not himself a machine. And this new principle, so fertile in its possibilities and promises, has for its protagonist a Jew!

If we examine another but allied aspect of the world's economic activities, we find similar facts. If the war proved anything at all, it demonstrated the the importance of the economic basis of civilization. In America the organization of industry has outstripped the organization of the industrialists; in England the reverse is perhaps true. There can be no doubting, however, that America is on the verge of a vast step forward in workmen's organization. It was surely of much import that the movement to be sound, as well as safe, should be guided at its outset by moderate counsels.

Moderate counsels have ruled the American Federation of Labour ever since, in 1881, Samuel Gompers was elected president, an office which he retained to the time of his death. The veteran champion of the rights of Labour (for Gompers was born in 1850) was universally regarded as one of the most sane and least subversive of the leaders of Labour. Again and again he opposed Bolshevism and its principles. If one of the greatest societies in the modern family of nations has been restrained from revolution and upheaval, much of this fortunate result has been due to the statesmanship of Samuel Gompers. And he was a Jew!

We could continue to add example on example. We could point to the services of Dr. C. Singer in promoting the academic study of the History of Science, to Dr. C. Seligmann's ethnological researches—he is now the president of the Royal Anthropological Institute. We could point to the brave work of a man like Sir John Monash on the battlefield, of Lord Reading in guiding the post-war destinies of India, of Sir Herbert Samuel in the noble enterprise of the resettlement and reconstruction of Palestine under the mandate entrusted to England by the League of Nations.

But though such examples are interesting, to cite mor of them would be to obscure our real claim. It is not these exceptional men that prove our case, though they add piquant and valuable details to it. Our case truly depends on the fact that a vast number of Jews are everywhere serving their country while their hearts still sympathize for their brethren in faith.

Mr. Claude G. Montefiore, for example, is a Jewish scholar, he is president of the Jewish Religious Union, he is devoted to Judaism. But he also serves as president of the Southampton University, as treasurer of the Froebel Society, and in many other national capacities. The same is true of many others, of Lord Bearsted, Sir Philip Magnus, Sir R. Waley Cohen, Mr. Philip Hartog, Dr. R. N. Salaman, Sir Isidore Spellmann, of the Rothschilds, the Swaythlings and the Nathans.

It is true of the Jewish clergy. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, is, to cite but one instance, not only president of the Jewish Institute of Religion, but he is a recognized and respected power in the national life of the United States. The Rev. J. F. Stern, in our own metropolis contrives to serve his synagogues and his city with equal devotion. But why select names, when of the Chief Rabbi, as of the least of his colleagues, the same may be said?

The moral of our argument is this: let those who would form a fair judgment on the modern Jews take a more comprehensive survey. Let them cease to limit their observation to the money market, though the services of the Jews to finance have been and are beneficent in the main. The predatory minority must not be used as tar with which to brush the beneficent majority. But the Jews are doing other things besides attending the bourses. We have shown that in the world's work as a whole they are taking a share, a share far larger than their numerical proportion to the general population. We do not ask for a cessation of criticism, but we do ask for a criticism based on knowledge rather than on ignorance, on objective observation rather than on subjective prejudice.

OVER ONE MILLION DUNAM OF LAND NOW OWNED BY JEWS IN PALESTINE

Increased Immigration with Greater Activity in Agricultural Colonization Brings Important Additions to Jewish Land Holdings—Health Work Greatly Expanded to Provide for Needs of New Settlers

New York.—Over one million dunams of land is now owned by Jews in Palestine, according to a report just received at National Headquarters of the Keren Hayesod. The increase in land ownership comes as a result of the great influx of Jewish settlers during the past year and the efforts of the Keren Hayesod to establish the pioneers in their agricultural colonies on land purchased by the Jewish National Fund. Despite the increased land purchases of the Jewish National Fund and the extension of Keren Hayesod agricultural colonization activities, the acute land shortage remains the pressing problem in Palestine, because immigration, instead of letting up, shows every sign of increasing during the next year.

The Jewish National Fund, having acquired 184,621 dunams of land, has decided to purchase an additional 62,700 dunams immediately, to meet the acute situation caused by the vast needs for extended farm settlements to absorb the newcomers.

The increased immigration has also necessitated increased medical and public health activities, a report from Dr. A. Katznelson, Secretary of the Palestine Health Council, reveals. Hadassah Medical Organization, maintained jointly by Hadassah, the American Women's Zionist Organization and the Keren Hayesod, has increased the bed strength of its hospitals in Jerusalem, Jaffa, Tiberias, Haifa and Safed from 289 in 1923 to 328 in 1924. Patients in the hospitals and city and agricultural settlements increased greatly during the year. Hadassah's anti-trachoma campaign and infant welfare work has also been extended to the farm colonies.

The Kupath Cholin (Workers' Sick Fund), also extensively aided by the Keren Hayesod, is providing constantly increasing facilities for its members, who now number over 10,000 as compared to 1,200 in 1919. Every type of medical aid is now provided in over seventy localities, while branches are immediately established wherever new farm settlements or industrial centers are created.

NEW YEAR'S GIFT FOR JEWISH EXPLORER

American Committee Appeals for Fund to Continue Explorations in Palestine under Dr. Slousch

New York.—The American Committee of the Jewish Palestine Exploration Society is raising a special New Year's fund as a gift to Dr. Nahum Slousch, for the continuation of its remarkable exploration activities in Palestine, under his directorship. Prominent men in all the Jewish communities of the United States will participate in this fund, which will supply the Jerusalem Committee with ample means for completing many of the excavations that have been planned for the year beginning in October.

Dr. Slousch recently startled the world by his announcement that the excavations of the Jewish Palestine Exploration Society had revealed the part of an ancient Jerusalem wall. This wall is believed to be a part of the third, or the Agrippan Wall, erected to protect Jerusalem in one of the weakest sections of its defenses. It was begun by Herod Agrippa about the year 40 C.E., and, though interrupted by a Syrian governor, was completed before the final siege of the city by the Roman Titus.

Many treasures and documents of great historical value lie buried in the soil of Palestine. The Jewish Palestine Exploration Society believes that many periods of Jewish history that are now clouded in uncertainty, will be clarified through the expected discoveries which these excavations promise to yield.

The officers of the American Committee are: Dr. Cyrus Adler, of Philadelphia, Honorary Chairman; Elisha M. Friedman, of New York City, Chairman; Sol. Lamport, of New York City, Honorary Treasurer; Arthur L. Malkenson, New York City, Treasurer; and Henry Hurwitz, of New York City, Honorary Secretary. Dr. David Yellin is Chairman of the Jerusalem Committee.

PALESTINE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK

Over 200,000 visitors are expected from the Near-East, including Egypt, Syria, Trans-Jordania, Mesopotamia and tourists from all the world over.

The Palestine Chamber of Commerce in New York, Inc., is under the auspices of the Judaea Industrial Corporation and its main object is to foster trade between the United States and Palestine.

The Federated Jewish Farmers of Ontario, organized last spring, should be brought to the attention of all serious-minded Jewish groups in Canada as the fall season sees the machinery of communal organizations set in motion. This association can lag and die, or perhaps lag along, or it can step lively and be made an important factor in the matter of Jewish immigration if the Jews in Canada wish it.

Since the farmers organized they have purchased a farm where they are training immigrants in practical farming. Fourteen men have been placed on the farm, two of whom would have been deported otherwise. Another man has been helped to buy a farm near Malton, Ont. Applications are being received from men who want to go on the land and from others who wish to bring their relatives from Europe and settle them on farms. However, there is at present only limited accommodation, and as many as desire to come cannot be accepted.

There are many Jewish farmers in Ontario whose success is enough to encourage newcomers to farm, and residents to build a farm center. They have cleared the land of stumps and made it produce a good living. They have lived helpfully with their Gentile neighbours and have made good at stock-raising and dairying. They have caused homes and barns to grow up out of the ground and have assisted actually, practically, in the growth of Canada. With the Federated Jewish Farmers in existence, life for farmers to-day should have far fewer difficulties than when those farmers, now prosperous, first came to Canada. Immigrants can begin now in the midst of Jewish companionship with kosher food and every help.

The farmers, with Morris Saxe, of Georgetown, as president, are about to start a campaign for the purpose of building quarters, buying machinery, implements and stock. They ask that each city elect from two to four members on the executive committee of the association. What they need is the best the Jewish communities can offer as representatives men who can take the cause to heart and give vigorous leadership. Let every organization interest itself in the farmers' association and help them to establish a training center which can rely on surrounding Jewish communities for support. This matter should be taken up at first meetings of the season, so that the farmers may know what can be placed at their disposal in the way of workers. Persons influential in communal work and generous with enthusiasm, are needed to identify themselves with the Jewish movement to settle men on Canadian soil. Otherwise it will fail and the loss will be a common loss.

Rabbi S. Felix Mendelsohn, of Chicago, writing in The Sentinel, tells how he, a reform rabbi, refused to officiate at an intermarriage which later was performed by a strictly orthodox "reverend" of Chicago's West Side. He reclines contentedly on the conclusion that reform Judaism, so often accused by the orthodox of demoralizing Judaism in general, was more consistent in its stand against intermarriage than the orthodox in this case.

Consistent he certainly was when he refused to perform the marriage unless the Gentile bride would undergo a conversion ceremony, for the Central Conference of American Rabbis insists that all reform rabbis in the country must demand that a conversion ceremony precede all cases of intermarriage. As a reform rabbi, then, Rabbi Mendelsohn could do nothing else unless he was willing to step out of the path laid down. But consistency is not such a sparkling jewel when the attitude itself is wrong, and Rabbi Mendelsohn was wrong, just as the Central Conference is wrong, for it has no moral right to ask intolerantly that a Gentile, marrying a Jew, give up his religion to do it.

If an intermarriage seems wise to the contracting parties, and must be, it does not follow necessarily that either party must give up his religion. However much the Central Conference disapproves of intermarriage itself, it should be ashamed to place religious conviction so low as to assume that this conviction can be donned and doffed, in haste and sincerity at the same time, as one might a hat. In asking a conversion of a Gentile party to an intermarriage, the Central Conference does not require what is heartfelt and earnest, but what is expedient, to patch up an annoying situation. Ministers, of all persons, should recognize the sacred right of every man to hold his own religion without coercion, and should realize, also, that hasty, superficial conversion does no good to any person or religion. This business of swapping a conversion to Judaism in exchange for a wedding ceremony is inconsistent with religion itself and should appear to the rabbi a humiliation rather than something to be proud about.

If the Jewish groom in this case wanted a minister of his faith to perform the ceremony, and the bride agreed, any Jewish rabbi approached should have heard the vows, for the sake of the Jew. In this particular intermarriage, which Rabbi Mendelsohn refused to perform, the West Side orthodox "reverend" was the liberal one. It must be admitted, of course, that such an attitude on the part of an orthodox rabbi is rare, the usual one being that of Rabbi Jesse Swartz, the new head of Goel Tzedec Synagogue, in Toronto, who was quoted in the Toronto Daily Star as saying that he would not officiate at a mixed marriage unless both parties became Jews. However, in the action of the Chicago "reverend" there is something for the Conference to cogitate over the next time it meets to exchange yarns.

The Rise of Orthodox Jewish Influence in America

By Dr. A. A. Roback, Department of Psychology, Harvard University

(By special arrangement with "The Jewish Forum")

The assiduous observer of Jewish life in this country could not fail to notice a transformation with regard to the balance of power in American Jewry. A number of phenomena have pointed in this direction culminating in the recent five-million-dollar drive for a Talmudical college to be situated in a wholesome academic atmosphere instead of in squalid Henry Street, where its predecessor was located.

Not so far back, it was thought a mark of distinction to be known as a reformed Jew. The orthodox Jew was surely to be identified with the erstwhile denizen of the Russian pale. He was bound to be either poor or a parvenu. His standard of living was regarded as below par, and he was asociated with anything but culture. Hence many an orthodox Jew seeking to improve his social standing deserted the earlier form of religion and became a "reformer." It would be the height of folly to contend that the thousands of recruits who filled the so-called temples actually recognized the superiority of the teachings of Mannheimer, Holdheim and Geiger or Wise over the doctrines to which their fathers had clung with unabated zeal and persistence. And when a whole congregation, or its majority at least, had decided that it was high time to convert the synagogue into a temple, the cause again was not a sudden illumination of Divine inspiration, but the desire to take rank with the social élite of the community.

This was only one motive of course to account for the metamorphosis. The second one naturally appears in the greater convenience of the reformed observances. Other things equal, there can be no doubt that an hour's service enlivened by the strains of an organ and a mixed choir is far more desirable, and certainly more pleasurable, than one of three hours; in addition the many burdens imposed by the orthodox shulkhan arukh were readily cast aside by many of the assimilated Jews who were guided by expediency in preference to religious principle.

This is by no means an indictment of the founders of reformed Judaism in Germany and their followers in this country who after deliberate counsel decided that the Jewish ritual must be changed according to the spirit of the times. Nothing is farther from my mind than to engage in religious controversy. Being outside of both camps, I can view the situation from the unbiased angle of an observer who is intensely interested in this phase of Jewish social psychology. And in order to encompass the present events it is necessary to understand the forces which were at work in the so-called assimilative process of the American Jew.

It is scarcely credible that anyone will seriously maintain the exodus into the reformed fold to have been brought about by enlightened study of the intrinsic merits of the reformed tenets or the conviction that the orthodox form of worship and observance is untenable. On this score then, viz., of social advancement and relief of irksome tasks, we might have expected orthodox Judaism to be constantly waning until actually extinguished. But meanwhile something has happened. Those who believe in Divine Providence will cite the comforting dictum of ages:

הנה לא ינום ולא ישן שומר ישראל

"Behold the Guardian of Israel slumbereth not nor sleepeth," but the student of history need not soar so high. Orthodox Jewry with its latent possibilities had begun to assert itself. The social distinction between the orthodox and the reformed was no longer to be drawn after many of the wealthiest and most prominent members of the most important Jewish centers chose to adhere to their rigorous discipline. Moreover they had begun to evince an educational activity, placing a goodly portion of their fortunes at the disposal of the religious institutions which were gradually being established to uphold the old traditions.

But why was reformed Judaism so successful fifteen or twenty years ago? What had occurred to undermine its influence? In the first place, we must remember that the American Jew up till lately was either a member of a settled family or else he was an immigrant. The immigrant masses were still in a state of flux. They were groping about and some had found their way into the spacious avenue of reformed Judaism. These were progresive individuals, but not necessarily men of firm traditions. Those with conservative principles could not adjust themselves so easily, but once they found themselves, their latent possibilities became manifest, if not in their own generation, at least in that of their sons, with the result that the apparently backward, a decade or more later, were able to proclaim their ascendancy by dint of their dogged persistence; and anyone who questions this persistence will only have to compare the difference in external appearance between the orthodox synagogues and the reformed temples of twenty years ago with their close rivalry in architecture and equipment at present to convince himself of the growth of orthodox morale.

But aside from the comparison of the houses of worship in beauty or stateliness, who would have foretold even ten years ago that a Yeshibah would be erected (the Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Yeshibah) at the cost of five million dollars and easily vying, if not actually putting it in the shade, with the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, the pride and glory of the Jewish plutocracy in America? How utterly amazed the seminarian of old Slabodka or Telz who would starve each day of the week in a different home, who was the subject of Raisin's dreary and despondent Mai ko' mashma lon—how dumbfounded and almost transfigured this yeshibah-bokhur would stand at the contemplation of such a palatial structure for Talmudical study, a magnificent library and a well-appointed dormitory to sleep in, instead to the hard bench in the beth hamidrash, with a flickering candle between his fingers for a reading lamp?

It is a marvellous transformation, and orthodox Jewry by rising to its height has taken the first step to stem the tide of pernicious assimilation which has been threatening the existence of American Jewry, especially with the halting of immigration from Southern Europe. This takes us to the second great cause of the rise of orthodox influence in this country.

The restriction of Jewish immigration, because of its likely far-reaching consequences, was bound to have a reaction, just as an organism attacked by disease and threatened by spreading infection, marshals its reserve forces in order to combat the invasion. A compensatory process is in steady operation to "do or die." Such I conceive to be the state of American Jewry. The danger was signalled and heeded unconsciously, that is to say, none of the participants in the renewed Jewish activities connected their energetic work with the political situation and the imminent outlook.

Hitherto a handful of men representing the small minority of American Jews were looked to for relief and protection in times of emergency. No longer is this the case now, when the supremacy has been taken over by the more conservative nucleus of the Jewish people; and the reformed Jews, with their various off-shoots, are beginning to realize

"SPEED GIRLS"
SMOKING PERMITTED

THOMASHEFSKY'S STANDARD THEATRE

Friday evening will see the re-opening of the local Jewish Theatre, headed by Boris Thomashefsky. Thomashefsky has assembled a first-class company, amongst whom are Mme. Regina Zuckerberg, the leading prima donna of the Jewish stage; the Anglo-Jewish star, M. D. Waxman, who is well known in England as a versatile actor; the well-known comedian, B. Bernardi; Miss Schoenfeld, a soubrette of merit; S. Greenberg, Mrs. Greenberg, Miss Kanner, N. Tarfofsky, M. Simonoff, Mr. Schoenfeld, Mrs. Ginsberg, Mrs. Schoenfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Uhrich, and Mr. Ginsberg as musical director, and Harry Thomashefsky.

The policy of the house will be to present a repertoire of New York's best and latest successes, together with the best plays by contemporary playwrights. The management has spent considerable money in refitting the stage and theatre in order to be ready for the opening. The curtain will rise at 8.30 sharp and the management has promised that the last curtain will drop long before midnight.

ABBOTT'S STRAND

"The Speed Girls," one of the smartest and liveliest of the big shows of the Mutual circuit, comes to Abbott's Strand Theatre all next week. Ray Read, an exceptionally clever character comedian, is at the head of the company which also includes Nellie Nice, a lovely and accomplished vocalist and comedienne; Harry Seyon, eccentric comedian; Helen Manning, popularly known as the "vest pocket soubrette"; Bee Bell, a dainty ingenue; Edward Douglas, Cleo Masner and Date Curtis.

EMPIRE

Featuring Gene Shuler, a finished comedian of the later-day school, and Joe Young, his partner in fun, in a vehicle that brims with burlesque and riotous fooleries, "The Best Show in Town" is due at the Empire Theatre next week. Shuler is one of the men "who make the million laugh," who are starred in Columbia burlesque and has been seen in several of the best of its attractions.

COMEDY

Barbara La Marr may have been the most important person in the movie, "Strangers of the Night," but the most important in "Applejohn's Adventure," the play from which the movie was taken, is G. P. Huntley. "Applejohn's Adventure" is the play selected for the re-opening of the Comedy Theatre by Charles Hampden's British Players on Labour Day, September 7.

Applejohn wants to leave his monotonous home and go in search of adventure, but adventure comes and finds him in. And he find others out. The schemings of a gang of crooks frustrated by Applejohn and the ruse of a real estate agent who can sell anything, add to the hilarity. There is interpolated a rollicking buccaneer song composed for Charles Hampden by E. W. Miller, organist and choirmaster, St. Anne's Church.

Other old favourites will be the original G. P. Huntley, Betty Grahame, Sheila Hayes, Inthia Carpenter, Bruce Huntley, John Mood, while the newcomers will include Herbert Hindson, Joan Mason, John Power, George Lobb, Betty Brough and Elise Bernard.

SHEA'S

The chief attraction next week at Shea's will be Ben Meroff and his band. Ben dances, sings and is a good comedian. His company of "high hatters" are past masters of ultra-modern orchestration with Gene Gory and Al Devito in specialty numbers.

Playing in a short vaudeville engagement before the opening of the opera season, Craig Campbell, American tenor, will share headline honours at Shea's for the week. Mr. Campbell began his career as a church singer.

The rest of the programme includes Ryan & Lee in Einstein's "Theory Simplified," Joseph E. Bernard and Company and an Aesop fable.

New Year's Greetings

To Your Friends and Relatives in All Parts of the Dominion through the

Canadian Jewish Review

THE practice of sending New Year's Greetings to friends and relatives through an Anglo-Jewish paper is general throughout Great Britain and the United States. Its advantage over the old individual mailing card is evident in the saving of time, expense and worry over forgetting a friend.

Greeting Cards in the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW will take this form:

> "Mr. and Mrs. David Louis and family, of 6000 Wells Hill Avenue, extend their best wishes to their relatives and friends for a Happy and Prosperous New Year."

MAIL THE COUPON BELOW NOT LATER THAN MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, FOR PUBLICATION IN THE ROSH HASHONAH (5686) NUMBER, WHICH WILL BE ISSUED SEPTEMBER 18th.

The Canadian Jewish Review,
319 Bay Street,
Toronto, Canada

Gentlemen:

Enclosed please find $2.00 for which please insert my New Year's Greeting Card in your Rosh Hashonah (5686) Number as follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. (or Miss) (or Mr.).....

..... of No.....

..... Street (or Avenue)

..... City

extend their best wishes to their relatives and friends for a Happy and Prosperous New Year."

that co-operation is not only wholesome but an urgent need in view of the exigency of the times.

The well organized Jewish Welfare Board, with its numerous local centers, may be regarded as a co-ordinating body which also is being driven hard partly by the necessity of intrenching Jewish tradition in the face of environmental absorption. Neutral in its religious policy, it is able to effect a rapprochement between the two influential segments of the American Jews which otherwise it might have been difficult to reconcile in some communities.

The Jew with inclinations to nationalism, whether he be observant or not, cannot but help feeling grateful to orthodoxy for preserving the tradition of the race in a very important department of its culture. The impressionable child who is familiar with the various rituals and ceremonies as practiced of yore, will not be so easily weaned away from the legacy of his forbears as the boy who merely listens to an uninspiring sermon on a topic of the day and acquires a few biblical facts in the Sunday school. If the orthodox youngster's religion does not last, it at least remains with him as poetry, but when the reformed child's evanescent religion begins to evaporate in the atmosphere of his clubs, dances, parties and business associations, there is nothing to take its place, and with it is gone the racial consciousness, at least until the Gentile associates somewhat rudely revive it.

For this reason, the rise of orthodox influence in recent years will be viewed with sympathetic and hopeful eyes by those Jews whose head says "nay" though the heart beats "yea." For them it is not a question of religion, not an issue of truth, but a matter of life and death. Reform has been contending that we cannot expect modern and progressive people to abide by the old customs; the younger generation would not countenance it. Orthodoxy has demonstrated the fact that the observance of the Sabbath, fasting on the Day of Atonement and other hardships, are not beyond endurance even in our luxury craving jazz age; and what is more, the younger generation, under proper guidance, gladly bears the banner of the old traditions.

From all indications it would seem that orthodox Jewry in America is on the way to establish an aristocracy of its own similar to that of which England may well be proud. It is true that even there, such families as the Isaacs and the Montagues (Swaythlings) have already suffered infractions of their inexorable code; but we can still point to the stronghold of the Rothschilds, the Samuels and other families that have retained their pristine purity in defiance of the invading forces.

The names of Lord Balfour, Sir Herbert Samuel, Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Rothschild, the late Sir Mark Sykes, Justice Louis Brandeis, Dr. Weizmann, the late Dr. Yehiel Tchlenow, Mr. N. Sokolow and Mr. Ussischkin appear first in the third Golden Book of the Jewish National Fund as the principal promoters of the Balfour Declaration.

During the month of June 4,200 immigrants entered Palestine. This is a record figure for one month.

Winners of Second and Third Prizes out of 16,000 who Answered—

When do You enjoy Coca-Cola most?

Second Prize $300

Won by MRS. R. D. BRUCE, Entwistle, Alberta.

THE FABLE OF THE POOR HOUSEWIFE AND THE GOOD FAIRY COCA-COLA

Once upon a time there was a Poor Housewife, who lived from week to week in dread of an Ogre called Saturday-Cleaning-In-The-Summer-Time.

Now, no matter what expedient the Poor Housewife would try, to keep cool, this terrible Ogre would in few hours make her so hot and limp that one day she refused to do another tap.

"What!", roared Saturday-Cleaning-In-The-Summer-Time, "Not clean out your refrigerator? Not another word, or I'll summon my brother What-Will-The-Neighbours-Say."

At this terrible threat, the Poor Housewife sank on her knees, and pulled open the door. There, cool and alluring as shade to a sun parched traveller, lay a bottle!

"Why!", cried the astonished Housewife, "This is the first time that untidy Giant Bunch-Of-Fellows-In-To-Play-Poker ever left a full one!"

With great haste the Poor Housewife opened the bottle.

POP!—Out danced the loveliest fairy, her skirts billowing and fluffing and swaying like sea-foam.

"I'm Fairy Coca-Cola," she sang, and her voice tinkled like ice against a glass, and her smile sparkled like snow in the sun, "Give me a permanent home in your refrigerator and I'll always keep you cool in spite of that terrible Ogre Saturday-Cleaning-In-The-Summer-Time."

Third Prize $200

Won by MR. JOSEPH BELAND

Tancredis, Calumet Island, Quebec - Age: 109 years

(My age of 109 years on May 3rd, 1925, is certified by the parish record.)

"When do I enjoy Coca-Cola most? After a busy day in my garden—for then the toll of 109 years begins to tell. Genuine refreshment is provided by this drink that is well known even in this little hamlet whose inhabitants are largely my descendants and relatives.

"When one looks forward to his 110th birthday, he must be careful what he eats and drinks, and Coca-Cola refreshes the body of the old voyageur, river man and pioneer farmer. So today, at 109 years of age, is when I enjoy Coca-Cola most."
